How do I find other real estate investors?

Join a real estate investment club, attend the club's networking events and use the time to meet and get to know the other participants. Real estate investment clubs offer many networking and social events, oftentimes with professional speakers who are there to educate novice or experienced real estate investors. These clubs exist in most communities and can be found through local ads or fliers or a local real estate brokerage office. Real estate investment clubs attract people who want to invest and have money to invest in real property. Be sure to bring business cards to hand out. Volunteering to be a speaker, helping organize an event or start up a new club in an area that doesn't have one is a great way to get involved and meet more current or prospective real estate investors. Follow up with the people you meet after the event to find more about their real estate investment experience and goals.
